UNDERSTANDING COLLEGE COSTS

Net Price vs Sticker Price

Net price is what your family will actually pay to attend a college or university. The net price can often be dramatically less than the listed “sticker” price on a college’s website.

- Colleges offer grants and scholarships for all kinds of students—not just for athletes or those with straight As
- Most families will qualify for need-based financial aid depending on their family situation
- “Expensive” colleges with a high sticker price can sometimes be more affordable than schools that seem to cost less, after grants and scholarships

About College Raptor

College Raptor is building solutions to help high school counselors, college enrollment managers, prospective students and their parents with some of the biggest challenges related to college planning, financing and enrollment. We're working with education leaders including Dr. Richard Ferguson, the former CEO and Chairman of ACT, to create tools that solve challenges in college search, admissions and financial aid.
